

Every time your business takes credit card numbers by phone, online, or in person, you may acquire information that could pose a risk to your organization in the event of a data breach. Similarly, if you record your employees' health information for a company-provided health plan, you could face privacy-related claims if the data falls into the wrong hands.

Network Security and Privacy Risk Program

Data security is a significant vulnerability for many businesses, and it's usually not covered by traditional insurance policies for general liability, professional liability, or crime. No matter your industry, these kinds of network and privacy exposures are a rising concern — and the stakes keep getting higher.

Covering the costs of a breach

Safehold Special Risk can help. As a managing general underwriter, we work on behalf of top-rated insurance carriers to create risk management programs that meet the unique needs of your industry. Our Network Security and Privacy Risk Program offers access to coverage that shields your business from financial loss due to stolen, misplaced, or misused data. Whether a breach is caused by hackers, employee error, or a compromised website or point-of-sale system, it can have costly consequences.

With our Network Security and Privacy Risk Program, you can cover costs such as:

- Crisis management, public relations, and required notifications and credit monitoring for people whose information was compromised
- Claims arising from the theft of sensitive information, the disruption of online services for customers or vendors, defamation, or the loss of intellectual property
- Data restoration
- Loss of business income
- Regulatory fines and penalties

One solution for many exposures

Many common business practices can create network and privacy risk. You may be at risk if your business:

- Communicates via a website, social media, or email
- Accepts credit cards online or in person
- Maintains lists of customers, their purchases, and financial information
- Stores employees' personal information and health data

Our Network Security and Privacy Risk Program offers a comprehensive solution for your network and privacy exposures.
